The BIG Ideas

- ☑ Principles: Train as You Will Fight
  - ➢ "Fight" includes lethal/nonlethal
  - ➢ Develop agile leaders, comfortable with ambiguity

- ☑ Change The Army's Training Mindset (Training is Different)
  - ➢ Driven by FM 3-0 Operations
  - ➢ No return to a strict focus on major combat operations – offense and defense
  - ➢ Train an expeditionary Army; develop agile leaders
  - ➢ Train for full spectrum operations as depicted by the Aim Point
  - ➢ Training must focus on most important tasks

- ☑ Core Mission Essential Task List
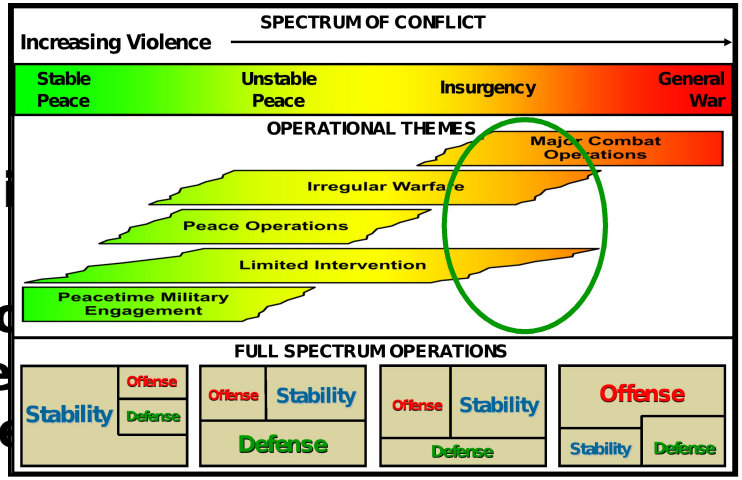
  - ➢ CMETL establishes training focus before a unit trains for a di mission
  - ➢ CMETL constant, but training conditio and supporting tasks to be on single ope



The BIG Ideas

☑ Directed METL

- DMETL establishes training focus for a unit's directed mission
- DMETL conditions and supporting tasks to be trained based on the conditions for the directed mission
- Core METL is a start point for developing DMETL

☑ Commanders' Dialogue

- Between commanders before conducting the training briefing and finalizing the contract
- Clarify expectations and requirements
  - Specific collective tasks to train
  - Conditions for training tasks
  - Resources required for training
  - Higher assumes risk on those tasks not be trained

☑ Flexibility for Commanders

- Commanders determine the time & frequency of training management events

Operational Concept

Army forces combine offensive, defensive, and stability or civil support operations simultaneously as part of an interdependent Joint force to seize, retain, and exploit the initiative, accepting prudent risk to create opportunities to achieve decisive results.

They employ synchronized action—lethal and non-lethal—proportional to the mission, and informed by a thorough understanding of all variables of the operational environment.

Mission command that conveys intent and an appreciation of all aspects of the situation guides the adaptive use of

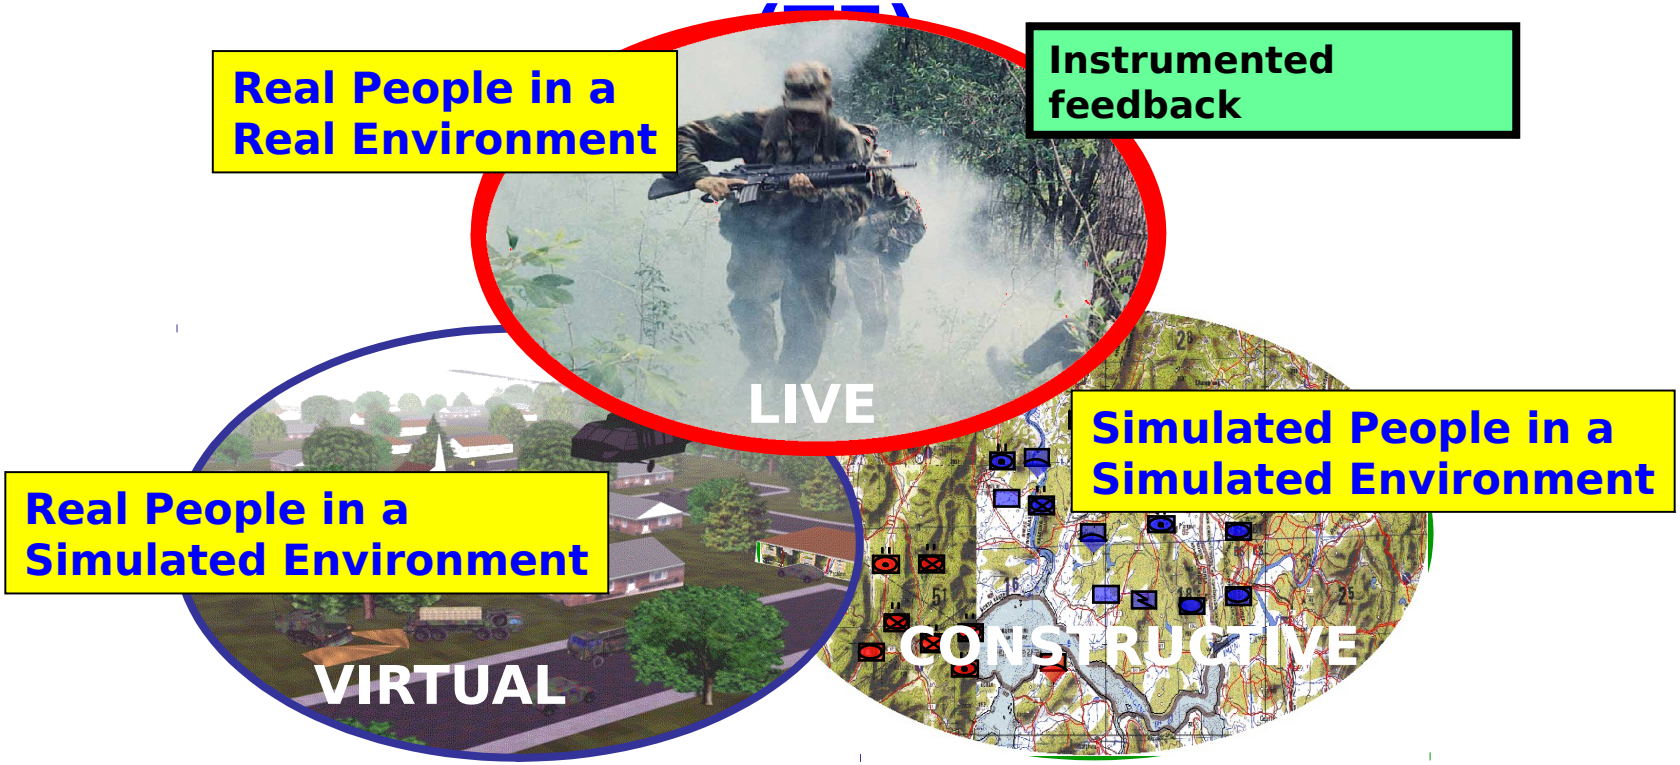
The LVC Training Environment



- Supports full spectrum training
- Prepares units/Soldiers for a higher entry-level capability for live training
- Facilitates rehearsals
- Increases training realism
- Expands the training “area of operations”
- Allows rapid repetition of tasks under varying conditions

GamingTraining Capability Gaps

Inexpensive, rapidly developed . . .

- Individual and leader training on specific skills in realistic environments; e.g.,
  - leader development
  - culture & language training
  - troop leading procedures
  - mediation and negotiation
  - rapid decision making
  - ROE & escalation of force

- Small unit training in realistic environments; e.g.,
  - traffic control point operations
  - counter-IED operations
  - battle drills
  - mission planning and rehearsal

aining Relationships in the Modular Forc

"Army force packages will often be composed of units from multiple commands and installations. As a result, units will be influenced by multiple commanders. These commanders will have influence in the development, resourcing and execution of unit training plans and preparation of units for deployment, but unit commanders are ultimately responsible for training, performance, and readiness of their units."

"… home station training responsibilities … remain more static than dynamic to minimize ARFORGEN C2 turbulence in the pre-deployment period. Commanders retain unit training responsibility even after subordinate units are mission-sourced into an expeditionary force package. Commanders of force packages … influence … training by exercising coordinating authority . . . with the higher . . . commander responsible for providing the unit to the Force Package Commander.

…training responsibility changes to the Force Package Commander … upon assignment or attachment. After attachment, the force package HQ should provide a periodic training and readiness summary of the unit to the losing HQ … to facilitate the planning of reset activities."
